

CHAMPION/DATA/ISSUE 4

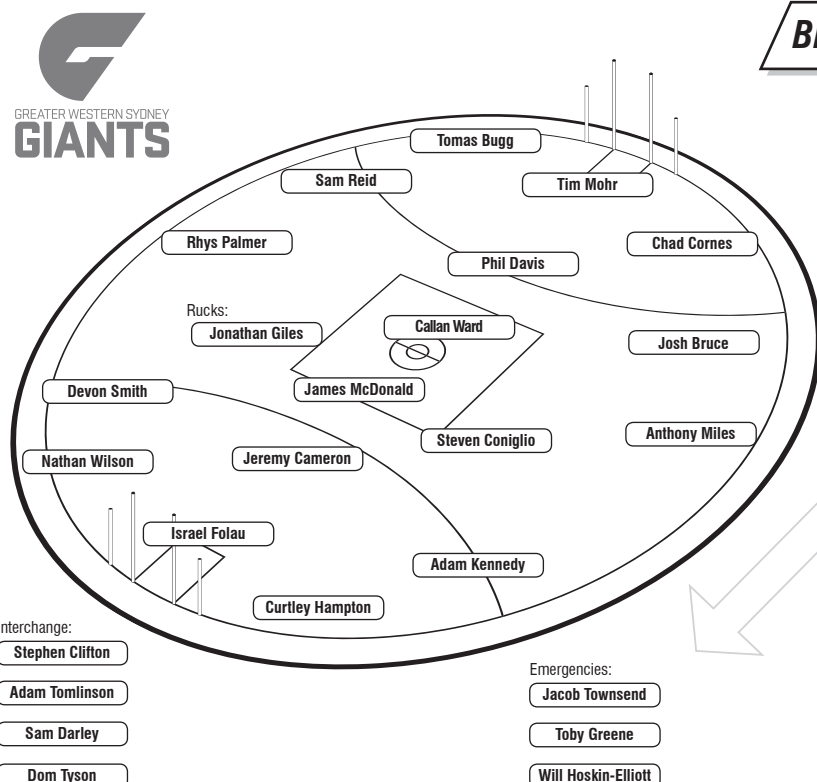

Hi and welcome to the fourth and final edition of the Fantasy Freako's pre-season rave. Thankfully the NAB Cup is done and dusted and we can turn our attention to the real stuff. The next few days will be all about locking in our Giants and Swans players, so choose them wisely as there will be no turning back. With most clubs fielding stronger teams for the final round of the pre-season, hopefully you took note of which youngsters played, as this will give you the perfect guide when making your final decisions, especially your bench players.

Enjoy this week's read and best of luck to all coaches for the opening round.

GIANTS ROUND 1 LINE UP

Greater Western Sydney will kick the season off in the cross-town derby against Sydney, and unlike with Gold Coast last year, we'll know its line up prior to the opening match. Kevin Sheedy unveiled his likely Round 1 line up as early as February, but that was far too early to make any calls. Below I have included my starting 22, with a couple of positions still up in air mainly because of injury. Tom Scully is the big one, with his facial injury now opening the door for an Anthony Miles, or even a Dylan Shiel to come in and replace him. Both played in the reserves on the weekend, but Miles would have to be the front runner mainly due to Shiel's lack of match practice.

One player that won't feature against Sydney is Dean Brogan. He's already been ruled out which means that Jonathan Giles will go up against the might of Shane Mumford on his own. What a challenge!

BEST OF THE GIANTS PRE-SEASON

Below I have included the leading performers for the Giants this pre-season, with only players that have played at least two games included. Ball-magnet Rhys Palmer has been the clear standout, averaging 107 DT points per 100 minutes, but his starting price may be somewhat of a deterrent. In terms of value for your investment, Anthony Miles is the pick of the bunch, ranking 10th in the competition for dollars per point, averaging 100 points per game. Popular picks James McDonald and Jonathan Giles both feature in the top-10, with the latter coming off an impressive 102 point game, completely outclassing Richmond's Ivan Maric along the way.

ADELAIDE

BERNIE VINCE

I put the onus of Vince a few weeks ago and he has responded accordingly. He was awarded the Michael Tuck medal as the best player on the ground in the NAB Cup Grand Final, finishing with a game-high 29 disposals on his way to 108 DT points.

SAM SHAW

Shaw has been a regular in defence across the NAB Cup and is almost certain to debut in Round 1. With Ben Rutten still sidelined through injury, he will get opportunities early and make you some cash.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - I made the big call on Adelaide a few weeks ago and I was right on the money. The Crows will be the big improvers this year. Remember they have a dream draw.

BRISBANE LIONS

MATTHEW LEUENBERGER

Leuenberger was one of the most improved players in the competition in 2011, ranking third overall for DT points scored at the Lions, averaging 93 per match, which included collecting at least 80 points in all but six games.

BILLY LONGER

The wraps are huge on Longer, and his performances so far have backed it up. Sharing the ruck duties with Matthew Leuenberger, he's scored 63 and 57 DT points from his past two matches and is a every chance to debut in Round 1.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Mitchell Golby and Pearce Hanley, two players I pumped up last rave, top scored for the Lions last week with 94 and 84 DT points respectively.

CARLTON

MITCH ROBINSON

Robinson did enough last week against the Kangaroos to put his hand up for a place in my side. He starred in the first half, collecting 13 disposals and 63 DT points before being subbed out of the game. His DPP status this year adds to his appeal.

KADE SIMPSON

This bloke never gets the recognition he deserves. He's as durable as they come, playing 144 consecutive games, currently the longest streak of any player in the league, playing 51 more than Brett Deledio who's next best.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Carlton is the only winless team this pre-season, despite playing all five games against non-finalists from last year.

COLLINGWOOD

JACKSON PAINE

A starting berth in the opening round isn't out of the equation for Paine. He's looked lively in the forward line, finishing with 14 disposals, four marks and 57 DT points last week against St Kilda from 84% game time.

TRAVIS CLOKE

I know I pumped him up last week, but after seeing Cloke first hand against St Kilda, he needed another mention. His aerial ability in the wet was amazing, grabbing seven marks (five contested) to finish with five goals and an equal team-high 118 DT points.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Dane Swan has hit 130 plus DT points in three of his past four H&A games against the Hawks. Captain material as always Swanny!

ESSENDON

MICHAEL HURLEY

There is plenty of upside to Hurley, especially if he can reproduce performances like the one against Brisbane last week. He finished with 18 disposals, eight marks and a game-high 120 DT points, but take note, he's lost his dual position status and can only be selected as a forward.

JAKE MELKSHAM

I doubt that many coaches will pick Melksham at his price, but he has all the makings of a breakout player. He played in every game last year and ranked eighth at Essendon for DT points scored, averaging 70 per match.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Essendon could very well be 3-0 after the first three rounds, with games against the Roos, Power and the Suns.

FREMANTLE

LEE SPURR

Fingers crossed that Spurr gets elevated to the senior list prior to Round 1. In his first full match of the pre-season last week against the Hawks, he finished with 16 disposals, five marks and 70 DT points. Could he be this year's Nick Lower?

STEPHEN HILL

I know it's only the pre-season, but Hill looked sharp last week against Hawthorn, finishing with 25 disposals and 95 DT points. It would take a very brave coach to pick him, but could this be the year he finally produces?

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Paul Duffield continues to perform well under Ross Lyon, adding another 81 DT points to his pre-season tally. He's good value if you ask me.

GEELONG CATS

ANDREW MACKIE

I've been waiting for Mackie to take that next step and become an elite Dream Teamer, but that hasn't eventuated. He averaged 90 DT points per match back in 2008, but he hasn't been able to exceed that mark since then. In saying that, you know what you get from him each week and at his price he's solid choice.

CAMERON GUTHRIE

Guthrie is a very strong chance to play in Round 1 now that both Josh Hunt and David Wojcinski are out injured. He's well ahead of fellow youngster Billie Smedts in the pecking order at the Cats, and although his starting price is a little high, he could be a good choice for your fifth or sixth defender.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - It's safe to say that Simon Hogan won't be featuring in Round 1. At best he'll be a backup player, so I would look for another midfield cash cow.

GOLD COAST SUNS

AARON HALL

Hall returned from injury last week against the Swans and was solid with 51 DT points. He didn't find a lot of the ball, managing only eight disposals, but he did impress definitely, applying an equal team-high five tackles.

KARMICHAEL HUNT

From a fantasy perspective Hunt proved his doubters correct last year, averaging a dismal 29 DT points per match, but a year is a long time in football. A midfield role this year should see him improve those numbers, so keep him in mind for a bench spot.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - I know he's ineligible to play this year, but the name Jaeger O'Meara will be a prominent one in 12 months time.

GREATER WESTERN SYDNEY

DYLAN SHIEL

Shiel made his first appearance of the pre-season last week in a reserves match, playing the first half. Although he's little chance of playing in Round 1, he will play sooner rather than later, so the big question is do you pick him in your starting squad regardless?

ADAM KENNEDY

Kennedy had his most productive match of the pre-season last week against the Tigers, finishing with 22 disposals, 10 marks and 97 DT points. As a DPP, he could be a better choice ahead of James McDonald or Stephen Clifton given his positional flexibility.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Callan Ward demonstrated his ball-winning ability last week against Richmond, collecting a team-high 126 DT points.

HAWTHORN

DAVID HALE

I never thought the day would come that Hale would be a viable fantasy option. His pre-season so far has been faultless, scoring 76, 106 and most recently 114 DT points last week against Fremantle. He could be a valuable point of difference as a DPP if he can hold his strong form.

SAM MITCHELL

Mitchell's inclusion this year is a no brainer. He ranked fifth in the competition for average DT points scored last season (112) scoring 90 or above in 18 of his 20 matches. He had a blinder last week against the Dockers, finishing with a game-high 36 disposals and 121 points.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Buddy will be hoping that Chris Tarrant misses Round 1, considering he held him to a season-low 55 DT points in Round 15 last season.

MELBOURNE

BRENT MOLONEY

If you're looking for a Melbourne player, then you can't go past the top scorer from last season in Moloney. Averaging an equal career-high 88 DT points per match, he cracked the ton in nine games which included hitting 120 plus three times.

JACK GRIMES

Grimes will play for VFL affiliate Casey Scorpions this week in a bid to gain some match practice before the season opener against Brisbane. As we all know, he'll start the year at a very tempting price, but will there be any takers?

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Melbourne has promoted James Magner to the senior list and says that he's ready to go in Round 1. A must have based on that.

NORTH MELBOURNE

SAM GIBSON

Gibson was talked up early as a potential early season bolter, but his chances of playing in Round 1 are now all but gone. He was an unused sub last week against Carlton, so at best he'll be a trade down target once he earns promotion to the senior list.

DREW PETRIE

Having put a line through Petrie a few weeks ago, he's hit back with a massive 122 DT points last week against the Blues courtesy of his seven goals straight. He looms as a point of difference for your forward line, possibly replacing a Nick Riewoldt if you currently have him.

@FantasyFreako - For coaches with Jack Ziebell in their side, take note that he will miss Round 1 through suspension.

PORT ADELAIDE

JOHN MCCARTHY

McCarthy did it again last week. He only played the first half against Melbourne, picking up 13 disposals, seven marks and 66 DT points (most on the ground at half time). As a mid-pricer, he could very well end up being a keeper.

KANE CORNES

Prior to last season, Cornes was one of the most reliable Dream Teamers in the game, averaging 27 disposals and 100 DT points per match between 2005-10. After falling out of favour last year, his pre-season so far has been solid, finishing with a game-high 119 points against the Demons.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - After ranking 16th in the AFL for DT points scored last season, the only way is up for Port Adelaide.

RICHMOND

BRETT DELEDIO

It didn't take Deledio long to find he feet. He didn't miss a beat against the Giants, racking up 140 DT points – the second-most of any player in the league across the final round. He's quashed any doubts about his fitness with that performance.

JACK RIEWOLDT

Jack is one the verge of overtaking his cousin Nick from a fantasy perspective. He dominated against the Giants last week, booting 6.4 on his way to a round-high 146 DT points. You can save yourself over 70k if you opt for Jack.

@FantasyFreako - Steven Morris did his Round 1 chance no harm last week, finishing with 26 disposals, eight marks and 90 DT points.

ST KILDA

NICK DAL SANTO

Ranking eighth in the league for DT points scored across the past three seasons, Dal Santo is a very safe pick for your midfield. Averaging 103 points per game in this period, he's scored at least 80 points in all but 13 of his 64 games.

JAMIE CRIPPS

Cripps will be given a role across half-back this season, but his starting price is a little too high for my liking, especially if we can get the same return from a cheaper cash cow. In saying that though, if money isn't an issue, he's a decent addition to any side.

@FantasyFreako - Tom Ledger was really impressive last week after coming on for the injured Lenny Hayes, finishing with 21 disposals and 103 DT points.

SYDNEY SWANS

NICK MALCESKI

If you knew that you would get 22 games out of Malceski, then you wouldn't hesitate in picking him. Sadly for us his durability has let him down, playing more than 15 games in only two of his seven seasons to date.

JED LAMB

Keep Lamb on your radar as a trade down target later in the year. He's unlikely to play in the early rounds, but as a first round draft pick the Swans will be keen to get plenty of games into him.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Luke Parker just keeps on getting better with every game. He racked up 32 disposals and 109 DT points last week against the Suns.

WEST COAST EAGLES

GERRICK WEEDON

Weedon has done very little to excite me this NAB Cup, despite his promising start. Being a small forward hasn't helped his cause, so if you currently have him on your bench I would look elsewhere.

JOSH HILL

Hill is one of only five West Coast players that have played in every game this NAB Cup. He had his most productive game last week in the Grand Final, finishing with 88 DT points, but that could have been much higher had he converted well. With injuries to both Mark LeCras and now Mark Nicoski, his job security is looking good.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - No need to panic. Dean Cox did finish with only 27 DT points in the NAB Cup Grand Final, but he only played the first half before being subbed out.

WESTERN BULLDOGS

DANIEL CROSS

I have been a long time admirer of Cross, but the knock on him has always been his preference to handball rather than kick. What he lacks in that department though he makes up with his strong tackling, averaging a career-high six tackles per game in 2011. Consider him for your midfield.

TORY DICKSON

Dickson has snuck under the radar as a potential cash cow. He's every chance of making his AFL debut against West Coast in Round 1, and as a mature-ager he should have an impact immediately. Keep him in mind for your bench.

@FantasyFreako - Matthew Boyd averaged 135 DT points per 100 minutes this pre-season, the most of any player in the league that played more than one game.
