

CHAMPION/DATA/ISSUE 2

Hi and welcome to the second edition of the Fantasy Freako's Pre-Season rave. I'm sure that we're all looking forward to the NAB Cup Grand Final this week between Collingwood and Essendon, but our focus will also be on the NAB Challenge games. With most teams fielding their strongest side of the pre-season this week, it will be a good indication of where some of the player's are at. Keep track of who get games this week, as they will more than likely be in the mix for Round 1.

Just a reminder about next week's rave, you can expect to receive it on Thursday due to the public holiday in Victoria. Even the Freako deserves a day off like everyone else.

Enjoy this week's read and don't forget to follow me @FantasyFreako on Twitter. Get exclusive AFL Dream Team information from the NAB challenge games live and post game.

MPP (MULTI POSITION PLAYERS)

There will be a greater reliance on multi position players (MPP) this year as we look to cover those dreaded donuts during bye(s) rounds. Regardless of what approach you take, it's inevitable that you will be stretched at stages during the year. Selecting the right MPP will have its rewards, but you have to do it correctly to reap the full benefits. For example, it's no point having Goddard, Gilbee and Deledio all as defenders, if you don't have a MPP in the midfield that you can swap them around with. In this instance, having Gibbs as a midfielder will enable you to make such moves. This philosophy also applies to swapping players between you midfield and forward line. There is no right or wrong amount to have in your side, so don't lose focus of the big picture. It helps to have them in your team, but don't make it the sole focus of your selection process.

Below I have included a table of the best performing MPP, which includes their average for each year of the past three years and overall record over this period. It's no surprise that Goddard is the pick of the bunch, with Gibbs not too far behind. Don't right off Jetta or Dangerfield, as these are two players' that are expected to make great inroads in 2011.

BARGAIN BASEMENT MPP

MPP aren't only resigned to your premiums, you can also pick them as rookies / bargain priced players. This will provide you with greater coverage when moving players around, giving you a much needed boost during those troublesome rounds. ADELAIDE CROWS

IAN CALLINAN

You can cross Callinan off your list. After looking like he would be promoted to the senior list before Round 1, that's now out the door after he suffered a serious biceps injury in the NAB Challenge clash against Carlton. Teammate McKernan could now be an option as his replacement.

BRODIE SMITH

Smith hasn't been talked up like several other draftees. He has been impressive so far this pre-season, playing in every match in a role across half back/wing. He was a solid contributor against the Blues in the NAB Challenge last week, finishing with 12 disposals, five marks and 60 points.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - It was carnage for the Crows in the NAB Challenge last week, suffering four serious injuries, with Kurt Tippet one of them.

BRISBANE LIONS

ROHAN BEWICK

Bewick will come into calculations for a place in the Lions side for Round 1. He was one of several players' to impress last week against Melbourne in the NAB Challenge, finishing with 14 disposals, seven marks, two goals and 70 points. He has two seasons of WAFL football under his belt which will hold him in good stead.

JONATHAN BROWN

Brown may go into Round 1 without a game under his belt as a knee infection has derailed his pre-season campaign. He's no longer an automatic selection if you ask me, but if you decide to start with him, his form in the season opener across the past three years has been impressive, scoring a combined 14 goals from these matches.

@FantasyFreako - In the wake of Fev's departure, Mitch Clark has trained with the forward group all pre-season, which suggests his ruck time may be limited. Avoid

CARLTON

NICHOLAS DUIGAN

Duigan is almost certain to debut against Richmond in Round 1. A mature-age recruit, he has been rock solid in defence this pre-season, returning scores of 93 and 66 points in his last two matches. As a basement price defender he'll make you plenty of cash. Jump on!

CHRIS YARRAN

Yarran has spent the entire pre-season training for a role in defence. The move has been a successful one to date, finishing with 22 disposals, three marks and 80 points in last week's NAB Challenge match against Adelaide. At $249,700 he has to be considered.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Jarrad Waite finished with 12 kicks and 10 marks last week against Adelaide. Unlike 2010, he can only be selected as a forward this year.

COLLINGWOOD

SIMON BUCKLEY

It remains to be seen if Buckley in the mix for a starting berth in Round 1, despite featuring prominently during the NAB Cup. There's a lot of upside to him, but he failed to play at all in 2010 after playing three of the four pre-season games last year. He has been handy across half-back in the NAB Cup so far returning scores of 53 and 59 points.

SCOTT PENDLEBURY

If you already have Swan in your midfield, then it may be hard to fit in his partner in crime in Pendlebury. Having two guns from the one club in the same position can be risky, especially when the Magpies have byes in rounds 7 and 13. If you decide to pick him ahead of Swan you won't be disappointed, with Pendles ranking sixth overall for points scored in 2010.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - With Nathan Brown out for the year and now Nick Maxwell sidelined, Lachlan Keefe looks tempting. Remember he can only be selected as a ruckman.

ESSENDON

MICHAEL HIBBERD

Hibberd looked right at home in defence last week against the Saints, finishing with 15 disposals, six marks and 63 points. An attacking defender, he won the Fothergill-Round Medal with Frankston in the VFL last season, an award previously won by Michael Barlow. Let's hope that's a good omen.

LEROY JETTA

It was only a matter of time before we saw Jetta stamp himself on a game. He set the game up with a blistering first half against St Kilda last week in the NAB Cup, collecting 13 disposals, two goals and 65 points. He was much quieter in the second half, but we had already seen enough. He's a definite breakout contender this year.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - The Bombers had six of the top seven scorers in last week's NAB Cup semi-final against the Saints – with Jake Melksham leading the way with 92 points.

FREMANTLE

RHYS PALMER

Palmer was on my radar last week and he didn't disappoint against the Bulldogs in the NAB Challenge with a game-high 125 points. He was the standout finishing with 33 disposals, four marks, three tackles and two goals. He never got going last year but after a solid pre-season he looks set for a big year.

NICK LOWER

Lower has been the best value player over the pre-season of anyone that has played more than one game – costing only $947 per point. He was among the Dockers better players once again last week, finishing with 23 disposals and 95 points. If he gets promoted off the rookie list, he is a must have on your bench.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - What a game from Nathan Fyfe. He was a sub last week against the Bulldogs, but came on after half time and turned it on collecting 23 disposals and 72 points.

GEELONG CATS

MITCHELL BROWN

Brown, the Cats first pick at the 2008 NAB AFL Draft, has had wretched luck with injuries. He's finally got his body right though and looked impressive in attack last week in the NAB Challenge, finishing with 14 disposals and 62 points. With the jPod out injured and Mooney still struggling, we could see him line up in Round 1.

COREY ENRIGHT

Enright must be seriously considered after averaging a career-high 92 points per match last season. He was prolific at times, topping 30 disposals on five occasions, prompting opposition sides to send a tagger to him. He is one of the most durable and reliable defenders in the AFL, missing only two H&A games since 2006.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - The Cats took a second-string side to AAMI Stadium last week, with only nine premiership players making the trip. Disregard the result.

GOLD COAST SUNS

ZAC SMITH

Guy McKenna expects Smith to play every game this season, which is why almost every coach has him as their third ruckman. A heel injury has kept him out of the NAB Cup/Challenge Series so far, but he is expected to play this week against Brisbane. The 21 year-old will be Fraser's understudy in 2011.

JOSH FRASER

Fraser will lead the Suns' ruck brigade this season, which makes him a bargain based on his starting price. He's way too expensive to have on your bench, so you'll have to start him if you want him in your side. He was Gold Coast's leading scorer last week in the NAB Challenge, finishing with 12 disposals, 23 hitouts and 82 points.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Gold Coast was given very little space last week by Sydney, managing only 201 disposals for the match. Only seven players were able to collect 10 or more disposals.

HAWTHORN

MAX BAILEY

You have to give credit to the Hawks for their persistence with Bailey, but unfortunately he's suffered another setback. He suffered swelling to the knee after an intra-club hitout a few weeks ago and has missed the entire NAB Cup campaign. A popular fourth ruckman for many coaches, he's confident of playing in 2011.

LUKE HODGE

There's a sense of déjà vu with Hodge this season. After averaging a career-high 117 points in the Hawks premiership year in 2008, he struggled the following pre-season with injury and only averaged 91 per game that year. He's coming off a ripper season this year, but just like then, injury may keep him sidelined for the entire NAB Cup series. Keep that in mind before committing.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Could David Hale be good option this season? He scored one goal and 84 points in last week's NAB Challenge match against Richmond.

MELBOURNE

MARK JAMAR

Jamar is the only recognised ruckman on the Melbourne list this season, with Campbell still on the rookie list sidelined through injury. He would have been a solid choice last season, playing in every game and ranking second for AFL hitouts during the H&A season. He must be strongly considered for your second ruckman position this year.

LUKE TAPSCOTT

One player to keep your eye on is Tapscott. As a high draft pick, we didn't see him last year because of injury, but in 2011 he should get plenty of games. He has the body to play AFL and last week was handy with 50 points in the NAB Challenge against Brisbane.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Jordie McKenzie is set to miss the start of the H&A season with a groin injury. Move him on if he was in your side.

NORTH MELBOURNE

MAJAK DAW

The injury to McIntosh may have opened the door for Daw to play in the early stages of the year. He needs to be elevated from the rookie list before he can play, but the signs are all good for the Sudanese-born youngster. He put in a strong display last week against GWS finishing with 10 disposals, 24 hitouts and 57 points.

BRADY RAWLINGS

A move into defence last season saw Rawlings record unprecedented numbers. He ranked fourth for disposals in the competition across the H&A rounds and averaged a career-high 93 points per match. He's not the most exciting player but he's one of the most effective. Make sure you consider him for your defence.

So impressed has Port Adelaide been with Irons, he could be a surprise selection for the season opener. A position on the senior list has opened up after Matthew Lobbe was placed on the long-term injury list, and he is the front runner to get the nod. He has been one of the Power's best across the past two weeks with scores of 45 and 88 points.

RICHMOND

NATHAN FOLEY

Foley is coming off an injury plagued season and the Tigers have been extremely cautious with his return, but at $235,900 he's tremendous value. He has played the past two NAB Challenge matches, with his last the most encouraging, finishing with 27 disposals and 83 points against the Hawks – ranked third at the Tigers.

TRENT COTCHIN

Cotchin has to be a breakout contender based on his pre-season numbers. His average of 99 points per match is ranked No.1 at Richmond, collecting 23 and 28 disposals from his two NAB Challenge matches. He is injury free and entering his fourth year, he's ready to explode!

ST KILDA

SAM FISHER

Despite suffering a heavy knock last week, Fisher has escaped serious injury and the club has confirmed that he will train this week and be available for Round 1. He is one of my all-time favourites, averaging at least 80 points in each of the past five seasons – including 85 per game in 2010.

JAMES GWILT

It might sound a little farfetched, but Gwilt looms as a decent pick for your defence. Let's look at the facts. He's coming off a career-best season and fellow defender Gilbert looks like playing as a forward this year. There will be more points up for grabs in his absence which could see him eclipse his 2010 average of 72 point per match.

@FantasyFreako - With the Saints placing Michael Gardiner on the long-term injury list, selecting Ben McEvoy has been made that much easier.

SYDNEY SWANS

NICK MALCESKI

I've put the mozz on Malceski. After speaking glowingly about him in last week's rave, he injured his knee at training and will now undergo his second LARS operation. What a blow for him and the Swans. At least it's happened in the pre-season.

SHANE MUMFORD

Mumford was a revelation last season, averaging 80 points per match and ranking third for average AFL hitouts during the H&A rounds. He's had an injury interrupted pre-season, but he'll be cherry ripe for Round 1. With Seaby returning to the fold he may not get the same amount of game time, but he should still be one of the leading ruckmen nonetheless.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Goodes had six goals to his name at three quarter time last week against the Suns. He sat out the last term and finished the day with 113 points.

WEST COAST EAGLES

MATT PRIDDIS

If Priddis kicked rather than handballed, he would be one of the premier Dream Teamers in the AFL. Last year he averaged a career-high 26 disposals per match, but 18 of these were handballs. He makes up for this shortfall with his relentless tackling, averaging six per match across his career and an impressive seven per game in 2010 – ranked fifth in the league. Strongly consider.

MARK LECRAS

There's no doubting that LeCras will kick plenty of goals this season, but he doesn't find enough of the ball for my liking. He has failed to average more than 14 disposals per game in any year to date, winning 49% of these inside the forward 50 across his career. He has been earmarked for a midfield role in the past, but until we see it happen, I would look elsewhere.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Jack Darling arrived late to training by 30 seconds last week and was disciplined by being left out for the NAB Cup semi-final. Woosha runs a tight ship.

WESTERN BULLDOGS

ZEPHENIAH SKINNER

There is a lot to like about Skinner. As I mentioned last week, the Bulldogs mature-age recruits should all have an impact this season. He was the match-winner in last week's NAB Challenge clash against Fremantle, scoring four goals and 80 points. Keep him in mind for your bench.

MITCH WALLIS

This kid was a ball-magnet as a junior. He averaged the most points at both TAC Cup level and the NAB AFL Under-18 Championships last season, averaging 127 and 112 per match respectively. He will definitely play this season, but it remains to be seen if he can break into a strong Bulldogs midfield for Round 1.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Brennan Stack got amongst it last week against the Dockers with 28 disposals and 10 marks across half-back. Could this be the role for him?
