ROUND 14

2011

CHAMPION/DATA/ISSUE 14

Hi and welcome to the 14th edition of the Fantasy Freako's rave for 2011. It was another tough round for coaches last week, as late withdrawals and injuries once again dominated the headlines. The big dilemma we face this week is what to do with Aaron Sandilands, as the big man has re-aggravated his turf toe injury. I'll go into further detail in my weekly focus as to how to deal with this.

Enjoy this week's read and good luck to all coaches for the upcoming round, as it will be the last head-to-head round before the multi team byes in Round 16.

BIG TOE WOES CONTINUE

There was genuine excitement when Aaron Sandilands was named in the side last Thursday at the selection table, but that excitement turned to despair when he went down with the same toe injury against Brisbane. There was some concern that he would miss the remainder of the year with the ailment, but the injury doesn't require surgery and he will now miss only four weeks. So what do we do? If you traded him out after his first injury, then in hindsight you've done the right thing. But if you held onto him like me, then there's only one choice. Trade!

He has to be traded out this week, because there are no guarantees when he will return, or in fact when he does that he'll perform at the level we expect of him. The most obvious replacement has to be Dean Cox, but the fact that West Coast has a bye this round throws a curve ball into the equation. If you can cover Sandilands with Drew Petrie, then picking up Cox is still a viable option despite his bye this round. If you already have Coxy, then you need to look elsewhere.

On averages alone, Todd Goldstein sticks out like you know what. He's having a career-best season, averaging an even 100 points per match, which includes topping that mark on five occasions this year. But the guy I would be jumping on is Ben McEvoy. Like Goldstein, he's the club's only recognised ruckman and is also in career-best form. Another deciding factor may also be the fact St Kilda has already completed its two byes, meaning that you won't have to cover him in the remaining rounds.

Alternatively, if you wanted to load up and cash in you could always trade down to some like Matthew Lobbe from Port Adelaide. He will now be given more game time in light of Dean Brogan's pending retirement, and by making such a move you'll collect a cool $253,500. Another benefit of picking up Lobbe is that he is a dual position player, which would enable you to switch him with Petrie if you desire.

Below are some of the player's worth considering when making your trade, but take note, those in red are unavailable this week due to bye/suspension.

SIZZLING HAWKS

It's hard not to get excited about Hawthorn at the moment, especially after its performance last week against Essendon. Its second quarter display would have given Dream Teamers around the land great joy, as it ran riot against a lacklustre Bombers outfit. In that term alone, it racked up an amazing 146 disposals, which was the most ever recorded by any team in a second quarter. It also grabbed 42 marks and applied 15 tackles.

Sam Mitchell, who is my favourite player going around at the minute, collected 15 disposals and two marks for the term. He finished with 38 disposals for the match, which was the fourth time this year he has reached that mark. He is clearly having his best season, ranking second in the league for disposals and averaging a career-high 111 points per match, which has included scoring 103 in all but two of his 12 games this year. What a star!

BRISBANE LIONS

FREAKO SAYS:

If you only watched the first quarter of last week's match against Fremantle, then you would have gone away thinking that Jonathan Brown had a blinder. He collected 44 points in that term alone, but could only manage another 18 for the match as the Dockers defenders blanketed him. As I've said before, stay well clear of him this year.

You would be absolutely filthy if you recently traded in Jobe Watson. He's suffered yet another hamstring injury, this time to his other leg. I wouldn't hesitate in trading him out, as he's likely to spend up to one month on the sidelines.

There would now have to be serious question marks about picking Cyril Rioli next season. He's undoubtedly one of the most exciting player's in the league, but his soft tissue injuries are killing us! Expect him to miss at least three weeks.

RICHMOND

FREAKO SAYS:

You have to go back to Round 1 in 2008 for the last time that Richmond tasted success against Carlton. Brett Deledio is one of only eight player's remaining from that side, with his record against the Blues since then the best of any Tiger, scoring 135 more points than the next best player.

WESTERN BULLDOGS

FREAKO SAYS:

Luke Dahlhaus is still cheap enough to trade down to if you're after a forward trade down target. He's definitely shown enough to hold his place in the side for the remainder of the year.
