ROUND 19

2011

CHAMPION/DATA/ISSUE 20

Hi and welcome to the 20th edition of the Fantasy Freako's rave for 2010. With the H&A season now behind us, it all starts again this week as we head into week one of the finals series. If you're facing a cut throat match, it's all or nothing this week, but if you have that vital double chance, then you are in the fortunate position where you could earn yourself a week off. For those chasing the overall prize, take extra care with you trades and captain selections and speaking of skippers, I'll be giving you an in depth analysis of the best choices for this round.

Enjoy this week's read and good luck to everyone for the upcoming round.

RUCK CRISIS ON THE EVE OF FINALS

Bluey McKenna has delivered a bombshell this week by declaring that he may be resting Zac Smith, which is understandable because he definitely looks like he's run out of puff. With North Melbourne also having the bye, this could prove to be costly because we will then be left short covering Todd Goldstein / Drew Petrie (if you're playing him as a ruckman). To add insult to injury, Dean Cox is also under an injury cloud after he copped a knock to the hip last week against Richmond. He was subsequently nursed through the remainder of the match as a forward and finished with a season-low 11 disposals, 13 hitouts and 57 points. The club says that he should be right to go against Melbourne, but if it chooses to err on the side of caution it could be disastrous for almost 50% of the competition.

So what do we do? Well this all depends on how many trades you have left. If you can afford to trade, then bringing in Ben McEvoy or Shane Mumford is definitely the way to go. Even Matthew Leuenberger looks to be a good option, with Lion ranking second in the league for hitouts behind Goldstein. If you want to keep Goldstein / Petrie, then your only other option is to trade out Smith and find short term cover in the form of Max Bailey, Matthew Lobbe or even Ivan Maric who now seems to be back in favour at the Crows.

Whichever way you decide to go, it will be a crucial decision that could make or break your year. To assist you in making the call, I have included a list of the form ruckman of the competition across the past four rounds.

ROUND 21 CAPTAINS

Having reached the business end of the season, each week I will provide you with the leading captain options for the round, which will include their last three games against that week's opponent (3 being their most recent game). If we look at the best option this week based on numbers alone, then it has to be Bryce Gibbs who averages 119 points against Fremantle from his past three matches. Taking into account that he also has a score of 142 points against them, he certainly looks appealing.

It's hard to go past Dane Swan though despite his below par 83 points against St Kilda in Round 11. We must cut him a bit of slack for that score because he was playing injured at the time. In his two previous games against them, he returned solid numbers (138 and 112 points) and I expect a similar score from him this week. Team mate Scott Pendlebury also looks a solid choice, but the uncertainty of a Clinton Jones tag could turn some coaches off.

My top captain choice for this round though is Nick Dal Santo. He's tearing it up at the moment, averaging 128 points per match since Round 13 which is ranked second in the league behind Swan. His record against Collingwood is also outstanding, averaging 113 points from his past three games and considering that the Magpies don't tag, there is no bigger certainty in my opinion. Pencil him in!

FREAKO SAYS:

Alan Didak was never going to play a full game last week against Port Adelaide, so it was no surprise to anyone that he started the match as the sub. Expect him to get more game time this week against St Kilda, but he'll cop a tag from Sean Dempster, so be wary if you're starting him on the ground.

Mark Harvey has declared that he intends to use Tendai Mzungu as a midfield tagger in the remaining rounds. He gets the thumbs up from me on that one, especially if he can reproduce performances like the one against St Kilda last week where he racked up a team-high 30 disposals and 114 points.

Both Grant Birchall and Matt Suckling look to be solid defensive upgrades if you're in the market for one. They rank fifth and seventh at the Hawks respectively for average points scored, and are both similarly priced as well.

PORT ADELAIDE

FREAKO SAYS:

It was a sad end to Chaddy's AFL career last week as Port Adelaide got smashed. It recorded its lowest ever score on the back of this drubbing, managing only 21 points for the game. What a shambles!
