

FANTASY FREAKO'S

PRE-SEASON RAVE

2011

CHAMPION/DATA/ISSUE 3

Hi and welcome to the third edition of the Fantasy Freako's rave. We're in the home straight now with Round 1 only days away. With the NAB Cup/Challenge series done and dusted, the next week will be crucial in finalising your side. Take note of which players played last week, as most clubs fielded stronger teams, which will give you a better guide when making your final decisions. Good luck to all coaches for Round 1 and I hope that you all register a first up win.

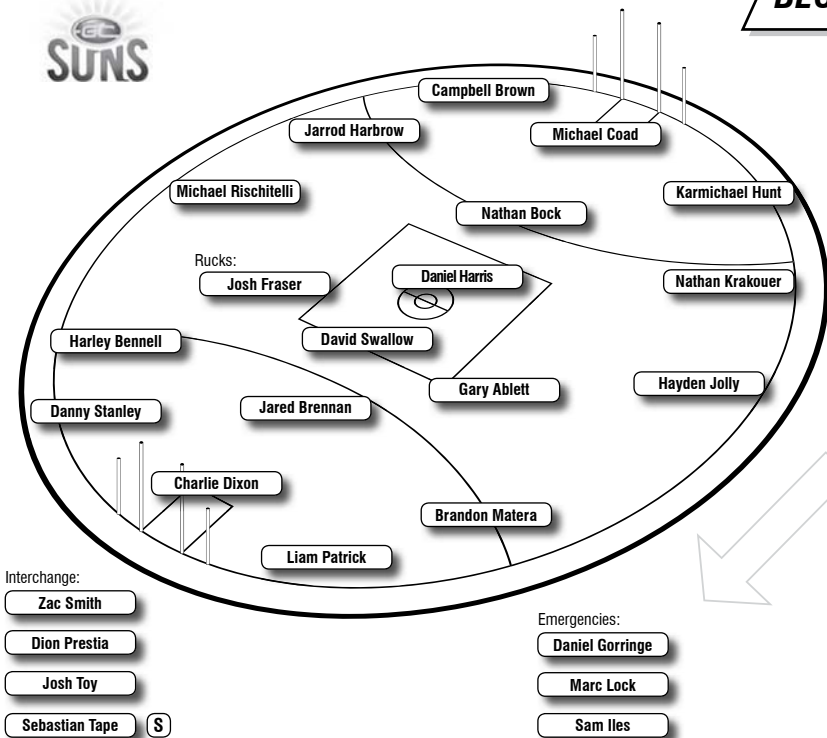

SUNS STARTING LINE UP?

With Gold Coast not playing its first match until Round 2, there may be some conjecture about the final makeup of its side. Below I have included my starting 22, with a number of positions still up in the air mainly due to injury. We haven't seen Smith all pre-season and I would doubt that Guy McKenna will risk a young ruckman without any match practice, so this could see Gorringe replace him in the starting line up. Ablett and Brennan are two other players that haven't featured, but I expect both to play against the Blues. Iles is one player that I had locked in the starting line up for some time, but he has only made one appearance, which has clouded his involvement in the season opener.

One player that won't feature against Carlton is Magin who is still rookie listed. The Suns can't promote a player to the senior list before the Round 1, so unless they have a long-term injury he remains out of the picture.

BEST OF THE SUNS PRE-SEASON

Below I have included the leading performers for the Suns this pre-season, with only players that have played at least two games included. Rischitelli is a clear standout averaging 94 points per match, with livewire forward Matera next best with 78. Popular picks Swallow and Toy didn't make the cut which poses questions about their worth, especially Swallow. Selecting Prestia ahead of the No.1 draft pick has been a popular choice for some, which gives you money in the bank and the flexibility of using Prestia as a midfielder or a forward.

ADELAIDE CROWS

BERNIE VINCE

You would've been disappointed if you had Vince last season. He was tagged out of games and suffered a number of injuries during the year. His price is too tempting to resist though, and if last week was anything to go by he could be back in town, finishing with 22 disposals and 103 points.

CHRIS KNIGHTS

After I put a line through him a few weeks ago, I'm back on the Knights bandwagon. He's been really impressive over the past two weeks with scores of 78 and 107 points. He turned it on in the final quarter against the Tigers last week, booting three goals on his way to 55 points for the term.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Seven goals and 126 points from Taylor Walker last week was eye-catching, but key figure Kurt Tippett was missing. Take note before selecting big Tex.

BRISBANE LIONS

JESSE O'BRIEN

He only made one appearance in 2010, but I suspect that O'Brien will be a regular this season. He has played all three NAB Challenge games, with his most recent against the Suns his most prolific, finishing with 20 disposals, five tackles and 92 points.

TOM ROCKLIFF

Don't let Rockliff's price put you off, he is a Dream Team ace! He backed up his 116 points from a fortnight ago with a whopping 132 last week against the Suns. With Black, Power and Rich all playing, he ran riot with 33 disposals, seven marks, three tackles and two goals.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Not sure why Jared Polec hasn't played the past two NAB Challenge games, but make sure he's selected for Round 1 before you pick him.

CARLTON

ANDREW CARRAZZO

Although he can rack up a decent score on his day, Carrazzo will always be a tagger first and a ball-winner second. He ranked sixth at the Blues for points scored last season, but his form in the second half of the year was poor to say the least, averaging 68 points per match from Round 12-22. Avoid him this year.

ED CURNOW

Carlton was able to upgrade up to two rookies before Round 1 and Curnow has won the first spot. He has played in all three NAB Challenge games and averaged a respectable 59 points per match. As a basement price rookie he could be a handy pick up for your midfield, provided he plays in Round 1.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - With Chris Yarran in defence, Jeff Garlett could be a smoky for your forward line. He scored three goals and a team-high 104 points in the NAB Challenge last week.

COLLINGWOOD

LACHLAN KEEFE

I flagged the possibility last week of picking Keefe in your side and he impressed in the NAB Cup Grand Final with 54 points. He may not play all 22 games, but he will make you money if he plays early on. Remember that he can only be selected as a ruckman, despite playing in defence.

DALE THOMAS

It would've been handy if Thomas was a dual position player this year, but unfortunately he can only be selected as a midfielder. Not many coaches have him in the picture this year, but after averaging a career-high 95 points per match last season, he has to at least be considered.

 Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - With an eye towards Round 1, Dane Swan looks a lock as captain, scoring 141 and 154 points from his past two matches against the Power.

ESSENDON

MICHAEL HIBBERD

We all know that Heppell is likely to feature in Round 1, but the same thing can't be said for Hibberd. He was more impressive of the two in the NAB Cup Grand Final, finishing with 16 disposals and 63 points, compared to Heppell's six disposals and 24 points. If you can't decide between the two, just pick them both as they're both dual position players.

MICHAEL HURLEY

Expect Hurley to be a big improver this year. As I outlined a few weeks ago, he will be used exclusively as a forward this year which in my opinion is his best position. He was the Bombers best in the NAB Cup Grand Final finishing with 16 disposals, three marks, three goals and 79 points.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - No player won over 20 disposals last week against Collingwood, with Jobe Watson leading the way with 19.

FREMANTLE

TENDAI MZUNGU

Has there ever been so much despair over a player that is yet to play an AFL match? That was the case on Saturday afternoon when Mzungu went down early, which would have affected thousands of coaches. He will miss up to 10 weeks with the knee injury, but on a brighter side, he will be a great trade down target mid-year.

NICK LOWER

After an outstanding pre-season, Lower has been rewarded with promotion to the senior list, making him eligible to play in Round 1. It's great news for fantasy coaches, especially after we lost Mzungu through injury. He's been a key figure in the Dockers midfield this pre-season averaging 90 points per match, so make sure you pick him.

@FantasyFreako - If you haven't got Aaron Sandilands in the ruck, find some money and pick him. He monstered the Eagles last week with 34 hitouts and 114 points.

GEELONG CATS

JIMMY BARTEL

Bartel was on his way to another huge score last week in the NAB Challenge until he was knocked out early. He sat out the remainder of the match, but he will be fine to go in Round 1. He had 34 points in the first quarter alone, collecting nine disposals and three marks.

JOEL SELWOOD

If there were any doubts that Selwood would struggle without Gazza in the side, they were quashed last week. He put in a best afield performance against the Blues in the NAB Challenge, finishing with 34 disposals, six marks, seven tackles, two goals and 133 points. Pick him!

GOLD COAST SUNS

CHARLIE DIXON

Dixon is one of very few key forward options for the Suns this season. Although they have a few young talents, none will be ready to impact on a regular basis. He was the Suns' only multiple goalscorer last week against the Lions, finishing with 17 disposals, seven marks, two goals and 83 points – ranked equal-third among his teammates.

DANNY STANLEY

Stanley has done everything right this pre-season and is assured of a place in the Suns season opener in Round 2. Although he's listed as a defender, he has been used in attack by Guy McKenna, averaging 72 points per match. He starred in the NAB Challenge last week with a team-high 23 disposals, 11 marks and 108 points.

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - They're going to get smashed at times this year, as they did last week against the Lions, finishing with 163 fewer disposals and 34 fewer marks.

HAWTHORN

LIAM SHIELS

Every season there is one player at each club that surprises everyone, and this year at the Hawks it looks like being Shiels. His pre-season has been faultless, playing the past two NAB Challenge games and returning scores of 98 and 95 points. He bobbed up to score three goals last week against the Demons to go with his 17 disposals for the match.

BRAD SEWELL

Sewell didn't have the same impact last year as he did in 2009, averaging 19 fewer points per match. That makes him an interesting proposition this season, especially if you're looking for a player around the $350k mark. He's too good a player to have two poor seasons in a row.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - The Hawks were the best side behind the Magpies this pre-season. Perhaps a top-four finish is not beyond them?

MELBOURNE

BRAD GREEN

Green could count himself extremely stiff to miss All-Australian selection last year after averaging a career-high 98 points per match. He is one of the better forwards to have in your team, as he often drifts up the ground to get into the play. He will boot the majority of Melbourne's goals once again this year, so make sure you consider him.

STEFAN MARTIN

We all know how successful Brown was at pinch-hitting in the ruck for the Magpies last year, and it looks like Martin may be groomed for a similar role this season. The new interchange rule will give utilities like him an edge, and at $145,300 he could be worth a punt.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Stay away from Aaron Davey. He's likely to get tagged again this year and his numbers may have already peaked.

NORTH MELBOURNE

ANDREW SWALLOW

All the talk has been about his brother at the Suns, but we can't forget about the other Swallow. He has belted out two massive scores this pre-season racking up 116 and 127 points from his two NAB Challenge matches. He will only get better this year and at $409,000 he could even be underpriced based on his pre-season performances.

BRENT HARVEY

Harvey is one year closer to having a fall, but I doubt that it will be in 2011. He was at his best last week against the Bulldogs, finishing with 29 disposals, five tackles and 117 points. He has been a consistent Dream Teamer for some time now, averaging at least 92 points per match in four of the past five years.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Atley's place in the side is somewhat clouded after he started as a substitute in the NAB Challenge last week. The Roos play on Sunday in Round 1 which clouds things even further.

PORT ADELAIDE

ROBBIE GRAY

If you knew that Gray would play every game this year, you wouldn't hesitate in picking him. He did as we expected him to against GWS last week, finishing with 22 disposals, seven marks, six tackles, three goals and 120 points. This guy is a potential star, but those soft tissue injuries are always a worry.

CAMERON O'SHEA

O'Shea is one of three possible debutants for the Power in Round 1 after an impressive pre-season. A basement price defender, he has played all three NAB Challenge games and averaged 41 points per match. I doubt that he would be a regular during the year, so I would look elsewhere for a bench option despite the possibility of early games.

@FantasyFreako - Matthew Primus has all but guaranteed that Jasper Pittard will debut in Round 1. Thanks for letting us know Matty...

RICHMOND

SHAUN GRIGG

Don't let Grigg's price tag deter you, this guy is a ball-magnet! He scored a whopping 134 points in the NAB Challenge last week, finishing with 29 disposals, 13 marks and three tackles. He could be a unique pick for your midfield and most importantly he will never get tagged.

TOM DERICKX

What has happened to Derick X? He's been unsighted over the past two weeks, which suggests he's no chance of playing in Round 1. It looks like the Tigers will go with Graham and Vickery to start with, but he should play at some stage this year.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - David Astbury has impressed this pre-season, returning scores of 75 and 77 points from his past two games. At under $200k, he could be a good option for your sixth defender.

ST KILDA

JAMIE CRIPPS

Ross Lyon isn't known for giving his youngsters games early, but if he was to this year then Cripps would be a certainty. The club has been impressed with the progress he's made, as he highlighted last week in the NAB Challenge, scoring 67 points – ranked sixth at the Saints.

BRENDON GODDARD

Although the pre-season is a good gauge of measuring how a player is travelling, on some occasions you have to disregard the numbers. An average of 57 points per match for Goddard sounds disastrous, but he's a Dream Team jet and we all know it. He must be one of the first picked this year.

Freako Radar player - potential pick

FantasyFreako

@FantasyFreako - Only three of the top 13 scorers were Saints in last week's clash against the Swans. Besides Nick Dal Santo, they had very few winners.

SYDNEY SWANS

LEWIS JETTA

I know it's only the pre-season, but it's hard not to get excited about Sydney's Jetta. He has the potential to be a big improver this year and his form over the pre-season has been outstanding, averaging 85 points per match – ranked second at the club.

RHYS SHAW

In light of Malceski going down, Shaw's stocks have risen. He led the club for disposals and kicks in 2009, but with Malceski and Kennelly returning last year his form dipped. He finished last year off as a forward, but I would expect him to return to defence this year.

@FantasyFreako - Adam Goodes in fine form heading into Round 1, averaging 97 points per match this pre-season – ranked No.1 at the Swans.

WEST COAST EAGLES

DEAN COX

Don't be too alarmed with Cox's score of 34 points in last week's NAB Challenge match against Fremantle. He only played the first half, collecting nine disposals and 13 hitouts for the day. He has made a statement this pre-season and will be keen to regain the No.1 ruck mantle from Sandilands.

JACK DARLING

Darling is a near certain starter for the season opener against North Melbourne. He finished with 11 disposals, three marks and one goal in the NAB Challenge, but it was his tackling that stood out, applying a team-high seven. He's a safe pick for your forward line bench.

@FantasyFreako - Chris Masten with 19 disposals was the leading ball-winner against the Dockers last week. He has returned three scores in the 60's during the NAB Challenge, averaging 64 per match.

WESTERN BULLDOGS

CALLAN WARD

I'm expecting a big year from Ward this season. He struggled with injury in 2010 but he showed in Round 22 that he was a player of the future with 107 points. He's been the Bulldogs fourth-best performer this pre-season averaging 85 points per match and at $228,000 there is a lot to like about him.

TOM LIBERATORE

If you had to choose one of Liberatore and Wallis to fill your bench, then Libba may be slightly ahead at the moment. He started last week's NAB Challenge match in fine fashion collecting a team-high eight disposals in the first term, finishing with 19 disposals and 49 points for the match.
